MAKING THE GRADE IS EASIER THAN EVER WITH ALPOLIC®

In fact, ALPOLIC® Aluminum Composite Materials (ACM) don't just make the grade, they pass with flying colors. That's why ALPOLIC's Silver Metallic ACM, (more than 8,600 square feet of it) was the choice for a recent cladding job at Fredericksburg Academy in Fredericksburg, Virginia. The focal point of the building combines radius, straight and tapered panels, creating a monumental appearance and a unique architectural statement on the modernization of educational facilities in Virginia. The industry's worldwide leader in innovation, ALPOLIC® offers Aluminum and Metal Composite Materials of unrivaled durability, superior flatness, rigidity and lightness of weight, yet amazing flexibility and ease of fabrication. Combine all that with ALPOLIC's great looks and virtually limitless range of finishes and it's clear that ALPOLIC® is in a class by itself. Don't Fear Flat Roofs

Conventional wisdom says stay away from flat roofs because they are nothing but trouble. The problem is not the roof itself, but the products that are used to make it waterproof and functional.

Typically a commercial roofing membrane is used for the waterproofing then a deck is built on top as a walk surface. Not only does this add weight to the structure, but it compromises the waterproofing. Further, when a leak does occur, it is very difficult to identify and repair.

Have no fear, Duradek is here! ICC certified as both a pedestrian traffic and roofing membrane, Duradek is both the waterproofing and walk surface in one product. Applied directly to a suitable substrate such as plywood or concrete, Duradek eliminates the need for a cumbersome built-up system. Duradek's features include:

- Textured PVC membrane system
- Proven history since 1974
- Variety of patterns and colors
- Industry leading 10-year warranty
- Installed only by trained professionals

Duradek's perfect complement

Powder Coated Aluminum Railings

- No rust, corrosion or painting

Building or renovating a house?
Here's how to find the right

Architect

ARCHITECT:

Randall Mars Architects

PROJECT:

Evans House

LOCATION:

Potomac, Maryland

Peter Harholdt

Each architect has an individual style, approach to design, and method of working. So it's important to find an architect who is compatible with your personal style and needs. To help in your search, follow these few steps to success.

Build a list of possibilities. Ask around. Find out who designed projects in your community that you like. Get recommendations from friends, relatives, and acquaintances who have worked with architects. Check to see if the architect is a member of the American Institute of Architects (AIA). Membership in the AIA means that the architect subscribes to a high professional purpose to advance standards of practice and service to society. This includes having a code of ethics and access to a variety of professional and technical resources.

Contact your local AIA chapter. Many have lists of member-owned firms that are interested in doing various types of projects. The most complete statewide list is published in this directory, but you can also search for firms on the internet at www.aia.org.

Call each firm on your list. Describe your project and ask the architects if they are available to accomplish it. If so, request literature that outlines the firm's qualifications and experience. If the office is unable to handle your project, ask if they can recommend another firm.

Interview each firm. Interviewing a firm gives you a chance to meet the people who will design your project and to learn if the chemistry between you is right. You may be working with your architect for a long time, so choose someone with whom you feel comfortable. Allow at least an hour for the interview, preferably at the architect's office where you can see where the work will be done. Some architects charge for the interview, so ask if there is a fee involved with the consultation.

Ask questions. How busy is the firm? Does it have the capacity to take on your work? Who will handle the job? Insist on meeting the person who will actually design your project. What is the firm's design philosophy? Talk about a project budget and the range of fees that the architect would anticipate for your project. Before you select an architect, ask to be taken to at least one completed project. Also ask for references from past clients. These are invaluable. In addition, you might want to obtain an Architect's Qualifications Statement (form B431) from the Virginia Society AIA offices. This standardized document may be used to verify an architect's credentials and other information prior to selecting an architect for a project.

Making the final cut. Unlike buying a new car or new appliance, you can't see the product and test it out. The architect provides a professional service, not a product. The right architect will be the one who can provide the judgment, technical expertise, and creative skills – at a reasonable cost – to help you realize a project that fits your practical needs as well as your dreams.

This brief introduction was excerpted from "Home Delivery," a guide to how an AIA architect can help you realize your dream home. Copies of the publication can be requested by calling the Virginia Society AIA at 804-644-3041.

VIRGINIA CENTER FOR ARCHITECTURE

THE VIRGINIA CENTER FOR ARCHITECTURE INVITES THE PUBLIC TO EXPLORE THE POWER AND IMPORTANCE OF ARCHITECTURE THROUGH EXHIBITIONS, EDUCATIONAL PROGRAMS, PUBLICATIONS, AND ITS RESTORED HISTORIC LANDMARK HOME.

Architecture, the most public and visible of the arts, speaks to Virginians daily, whether they know Thomas Jefferson was more than a statesman or simply appreciate the roof over their heads. And at the Virginia Center for Architecture, visitors can learn that a Founding Father designed the state's elegant Capitol, the South's first skyscraper rose above Richmond, and internationally acclaimed architects such as Frank Lloyd Wright, Philip Johnson, and Richard Neutra created Modern wonders here.

The Virginia Center for Architecture offers exhibitions and programs to engage visitors in considering the built environment that surrounds them. By presenting the best architecture of all eras, including promising designs for tomorrow, the Center for Architecture aims to nurture a society that distinguishes architecture from mere building and understands the value of well-designed places.

WHAT IS THE VIRGINIA CENTER FOR ARCHITECTURE?

- Learning center for the public
- Museum presenting exhibitions on architecture, design, housing, and community
- Destination for locals and visitors
- Advocate for advancement of architecture
- Home for the architecture profession

2004 Design Awards

Sixteen projects by architects across the region were honored in 2004 with Awards for Excellence in Architecture, but the winning projects themselves have an international flair. Selected from a field of 148 submissions, the award winners varied widely from a low-budget rehabilitation of a former meat-packing plant into a community center for inner-city youth to an exquisitely detailed complex for breeding thoroughbreds in Albemarle County. Evidence of an increasing global reach for the region's architects was demonstrated by a new research center in Spain, plans for a visitors center in France, a resettlement community for refugees in India, and an American embassy in Kenya. Two of the winners are research projects that investigate innovative methods for residential construction. Carol Ross Barney, FAIA, chaired the Chicago-based awards jury, which also included Andrew Metter, FAIA, and David Woodhouse, FAIA.

Repsol YPF Technology Center Leo A Daly

HONOR AWARD

This petrochemical research facility located near Madrid, Spain, is comprised of three laboratory wings connected to a central administration building. It contains office space for 400 scientists and staff, with amenities such as a 200-seat auditorium, library, and exercise facilities. The building appears as a long row of laboratories, emphasized by a glass-and-limestone curtain wall. The jury praised the architect's skill at lending gracefulness and human scale to such a large building. "The proportions and elevations are elegant," they observed. "And the function and crisp detailing go together."

Owner: Repsol YPF

Contractor: ACS

Nusonian House Studio27 Architecture

MERIT AWARD

This series of single-family houses is an exercise in prototyping. The architects sought to control the highest cost in residential construction – site labor – so the solution is biased toward prefabrication. Characteristics such as energy, service, function, and performance were linked in a computer program to aid the creative process. “This study is about selling better environments to people. It says there’s an alternative to going out to the suburbs and buying the ‘Williamsburg’ or the ‘Washingtonian’ model,” the jurors said. “This study is about how you produce a house, which is an area for immense improvement.”

14

George Peabody Library Quinn Evans Architects

MERIT AWARD

Built in 1878, the Peabody Library was innovative for its day, incorporating fire-proof technology, gas lighting, and an electric elevator. The current project’s goal was to address overdue repairs. In the process, the architects created more workable space, modernized the heating and cooling system, and restored architectural features. They brightened the reading room by restoring glass panes below the skylight. “It is a gorgeous building,” jurors said. “Yet, from experience, we know the pitfalls of doing something like this. They salvaged all the good aspects of the original building. And that’s difficult to achieve.”

7 New York, Teen Outreach Center
Cook Architecture

HONOR AWARD

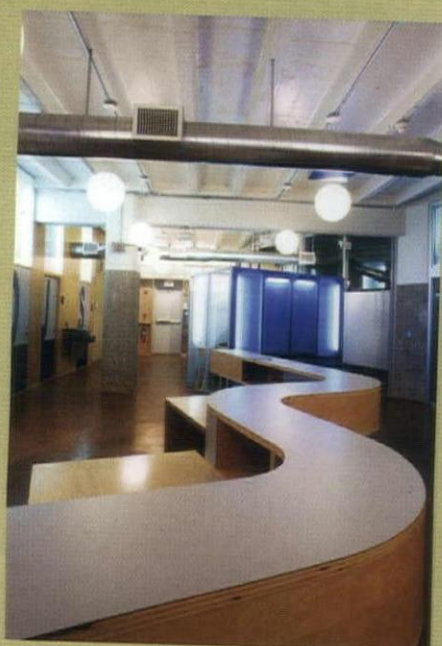

Originally a meat packing plant, this branch of Covenant House in inner-city Washington, D.C., has been outfitted with translucent panels, steel tubing, and homasote surfaces to create an appealing space. The kitchen, library, and computer room are free-floating, which makes for an airy and comfortable atmosphere.

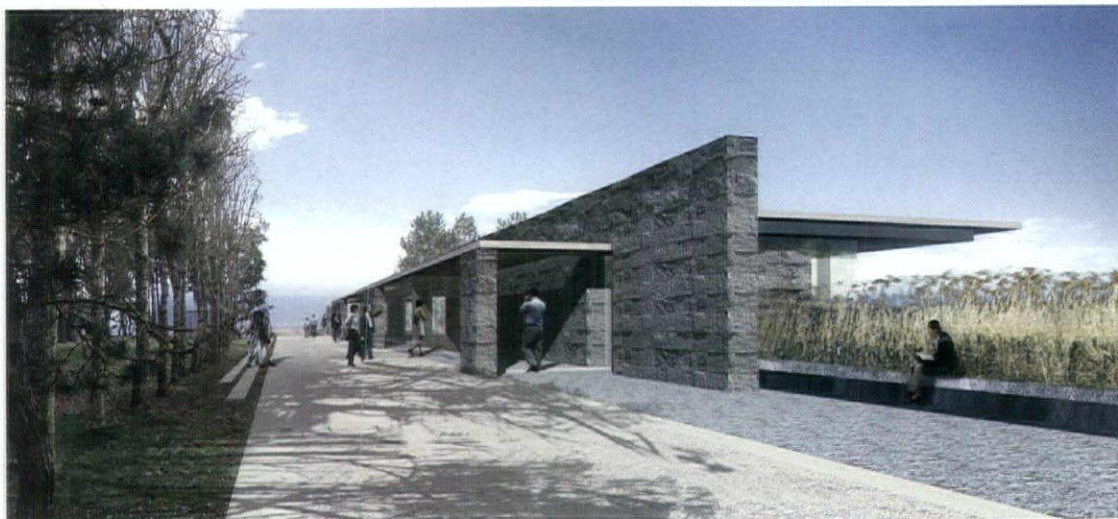

The lighting design employs inexpensive fixtures – and lots of them. Jurors praised the spirit of the project, especially given the small budget. “It’s a clever use of ordinary materials to allow light to penetrate and produce a clean environment,” they said. “It’s fresh without being patronizing.”

MERIT AWARD

Given the importance of the site, this as-yet-unbuilt interpretive center is designed as a place of quiet dignity. It blends easily with the site and orchestrates landscape views. The rough stone and wood aesthetic of local buildings is reflected here – then contrasted with sleek modern materials. Inside, visitors descend through a gallery that leads to a cube-shaped meditation chamber. Jurors applauded the degree of separation between the shoreline and the interpretive center. “When you are there, you want to be alone to remember what happened,” they said. “The architectural devices used to get you there are great.”

Millbrook Guest House
Meditch Murphey Architects

HONOR AWARD

The aesthetic of this guest house reflects the grace found in the contours of the Taconic ridges of New York State. Overlooking 100 acres of grass, this two-bedroom house features exterior spaces that are scaled to complement the residence. Grass steps cascade to the east and a bluestone terrace is tucked beneath a sweeping cantilevered roof. The living room is conceived as a kind of proscenium thrust into a natural theater. “It’s serene and crisply detailed,” the jury said, “and a nice mixture of vernacular, country architecture with modern detailing. It lets the landscape dominate, rather than the structures.”

Tibetan Resettlement Community MTFA Architecture, Inc.

HONOR AWARD

This community provides dignified housing for Tibetans who are living as refugees in India. The design calls for indoor plumbing, electricity, a place of worship, and a school. Each small dwelling has a sloped roof that sheds the monsoon rain and vents hot air through a cupola. The high roof also creates room for a sleeping loft. Jurors praised the clever pinwheel plan, which is efficient while allowing occupants a sense of individuality. "It takes advantage of primitive technologies and organizes them," said the jury. "And it recognizes that people need more than a shack."

St. Francis of Assisi Parish Hall
Bruce R. Wardell, Architect

HONOR AWARD

The addition to this Catholic church in Staunton creates new places for parishioners to gather. To one side of the original church a new parish hall was built, connecting the 1908 parish hall to the ministry building. The three joined buildings create the edge of a new cloistered garden. The pictorial quality of the new parish hall is created by the edges of the existing buildings, the courtyard, and the church beyond. "It is very holistic," the jury said. "The architects used the existing buildings to create space. And they connected two existing parish buildings. They made sense of a disparate group of buildings with one simple move."

Owner: Catholic Diocese of Richmond

Contractor: Nielsen Construction Co.

Woolen Mills House Christopher Hays Design Studio

MERIT AWARD

Located on the outskirts of Charlottesville, this house is conceived as a place between the urban and the pastoral. Its organization of space is based on the Eastern concepts of ma, or the space between, and hashi, which is the bridging of two edges. The two rectangular parts of the house are connected in an arrangement that creates a series of sun-filled spaces. Local and sustainable materials also make the house environmentally friendly. "It's like a classical country house in a temperate climate," the jury observed. "And we like the way the different woods are handled—the clapboard, panels, louvers, and the textures made by the sun."

Owners: Allison Ewing and Christopher Hays

Builder: Craig Dubose Carpentry

Burning Daylight Stables VMD Architects

HONOR AWARD

This stable complex in Albemarle County combines an administrative center and boarding/breeding facilities arranged around a courtyard. Fieldstone forms the base of the building and reappears as retaining walls on the site. Inside, a circular concrete stair leads to the second floor, giving way to a suspended steel stair that rises to an observation deck. The oak interior boasts "horse friendly" characteristics, while unifying the design. Jurors complimented the power and simplicity of the forms. "There are extraordinarily elegant details on the suspended stair," they added. "The details are daring, they are subtle—all at once."

Contractor: Martin/Horn

Poor Potter Archaeological Site Carlton Abbott & Partners

MERIT AWARD

To preserve the remains of a kiln at the colonial-era Poor Potter site, the National Park Service covered it with a metal hut in 1975. Over time, however, the shelter failed in its job. To reverse erosion problems and groundwater infiltration, the architect designed a simple wood frame and timber-truss roof, and added solid walls like a farm building. This design respects the landscape and provides better opportunities for interpretation. "It fits well into its environment, and it will help create the atmosphere they want at this museum," the jury noted. "What attracted us is its modest character. There are no pretensions about its function."

Client: National Park Service

Contractor: CATI

1666 Connecticut Ave. NW George Gordon Associates

MERIT AWARD

Owned by a nonprofit group in Washington's Dupont Circle district, this office building received a facelift to boost rental income. The architect revealed the ground-floor space to passersby and constructed a glass-and-steel trellis that incorporates signage and lighting for retail tenants. Materials inside the lobby recall the era of the original building, while the new canopy makes a fitting place for the building address. Jurors complimented the designer for improving the building. "We're glad to see that someone is taking the time and effort to take these buildings seriously — to recycle them and not discard them."

Owner: Joseph E. & Marjorie B. Jones Foundation

Contractor: James G. Davis Construction Corp.

Kessler House
Robert M. Gurney, FAIA

MERIT AWARD

A modern house in a traditional neighborhood – this was the desire of a married couple who wanted a home that fit their lifestyle. Generous spaces, an elevator, and accessible bathrooms address the physical limitations of one of their children, while the main spaces open to a 75-foot lap pool. Outside, a two-story volume with a steep roof makes the transition between the traditional residential street and the house's modern wing in back. Elements such as columns and clapboard siding preserve the neighborhood's domestic scale. "There's an interesting discussion that can happen here about contextual architecture," the jury said. "Is it simply detail? Or is it scale? Or material? This house would be a good place to start."

Owners: Lewis & Tamara Kessler
Contractor: M.T. Puskar Construction Co.

Department of State Office Building Hellmuth, Obata + Kassabaum

MERIT AWARD

The design of this U.S. Embassy in Nairobi, Kenya, blends highly secure architecture with local building materials and a welcoming façade. To accomplish this, the architects created a distinctively American porch shielded by an intricate louver screen, a colonnade, and an expansive lawn. The L-shaped central building wraps around a courtyard. “We’re giving this a prize with the hope that the Department of State continues to commission good architecture that’s responsive to history, context, and technology – and that they don’t default to just doing one cookie cutter embassy after another,” the jury said.

Owner: U.S. Department of State

MERIT AWARD

Over the years, America's first music conservatory had gradually turned its back on its Baltimore neighborhood. Visitors were required to enter through a guard shack, and music patrons wandered underground corridors to reach the box office. The architects transformed the campus by restoring the main entrance and renewing the South Terrace, which removed barriers to the neighborhood. A new arcade consolidates circulation and leads to new performance and rehearsal spaces. Jurors praised the urban gestures that opened the institute to the community and exploited what had been the wasted spaces between buildings.

MERIT AWARD

The goal for this prototype is to reconnect the cycles of man and nature. With electricity-generating panels and rooftop gardens, the three-story building both collects energy and replenishes green space. Daylighting, rainwater recycling, and the use of local, recycled, and sustainably harvested materials produce a house that surpasses mere efficiency – it creates new energy. Jurors complimented the study's emphasis on the greening of the city. "This project worries about the machinery, the science of a house – and we, as architects, are going to have to do that," the jury said. "We can't fixate only on material or detail."

Robert A. Boynton, FAIA

By Rob Walker

There was a catch in Bob Boynton's throat as he described the recent morning when he came early to his quiet office in Richmond's elegant Ironfronts building. He was there to call a friend to pass the word that his mentor and colleague, James Glave, AIA, one of the old lions of Virginia architecture, had died.

There were so many interwoven threads in the city's vibrant community of architecture professionals that seemed to converge at that place and time. "I was reminded of all the great years and great people," Boynton says. "I realized I probably shouldn't have been here alone with my thoughts."

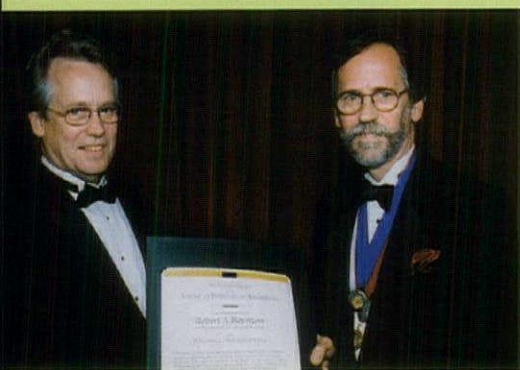

That moment of reflection followed soon after one of recognition of Boynton's own record of leadership and good work on behalf of the architecture profession. Robert A. Boynton, FAIA, principal of the Richmond firm Boynton Rothschild Rowland Architects, immediate past president of the National Council of Architectural Registration Boards, last fall was awarded the Virginia Society AIA's highest professional honor, the William C. Noland Medal.

Boynton's nominators properly focused on his long list of achievements on behalf of the AIA and of architects locally, nationally, and worldwide. Among his accomplishments was his work to gain mutual recognition and reciprocity agreements for architects in Europe, Asia, Canada, Mexico, and the United States, as well as for reciprocity among states where "archaic" regulations still limit the free flow of practice.

He has been an advocate for continuing education for architects and for ethically grounded education. He sat on the state licensing board for 11 years, serving three governors, and he has been appointed to the National Architectural Accrediting Board. He is a longtime mentor to and advocate for emerging professionals.

"His true desire is to help make things better for others entering the profession," says Richmond architect Richard Ford, AIA, whom Boynton describes as his closest friend for the past 45 years. With Boynton, Ford says, "what you see is what you get. He is sincere, well meaning, and down to earth. He looks for what's right and then tries to make it better. His claim to fame is all he has done for other people."

Bob Steele, AIA, a friend for two decades, elaborates: "He has always practiced with honor. He has always exhibited care and grace. He has always made whatever committee or board, large or small, better by his involvement. He is proud to be an architect and he represents us all well." That his peers and colleagues acknowledged his work is "tremendously rewarding," Boynton says. "It's been a lot of fun all along the way."

When Boynton was a student at Virginia Tech, Charles Burchard, dean of the College of Architecture, recognized his talent and helped him land a job interview with Marcel Breuer, one of the innovators from the Bauhaus who was working in New York. Breuer offered him a job, but Boynton passed. "I still kick myself for not taking it," Boynton says. Instead, he came back to Richmond.

Still hungry for the big time, he soon moved to Washington to work for several years with Arthur Cotton Moore. "We worked with Jacob Javitz and Ethel Kennedy on the Robert F. Kennedy Square" in New York, "and on projects around Washington," Boynton says. By the early 1970s, he returned to Richmond to establish a practice, a decision he has not regretted. "Adaptive reuse was just catching on," notes Boynton. "There were a lot of tremendously talented people working here."

As a young intern, Boynton worked with architects Warren Hardwicke, AIA, and Bob Stewart, AIA, on the design for the North Wing of the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts. He calls Jack Wilson, FAIA, of Rawlings and Wilson "a tremendous mentor." By the early 1980s, he had joined one of Richmond's established firms, Glave Newman Anderson, eventually running a design studio with Glave.

The Branch Cabell and the Virginia Supplemental Retirement System buildings on Main Street in Richmond are among other buildings that Boynton worked on. His work is evident on college campuses around the state, as well. At his alma mater alone, there's the President's House, the multipurpose livestock center, an entry addition to Cheatham Hall, and the Graduate Life Center at Donaldson Brown. There's the Virginia Horse Center in Lexington. Dozens of other projects in central Richmond were touched by Boynton and his partners. Design teams that included Boynton have won 14 design awards.

But point to all his accomplishments and ask Boynton to identify sources of personal satisfaction, and he turns to thoughts of professional practice. "I enjoy working with people who have faith in me," he says with more enthusiasm than might be expected from someone who joined the AIA back in 1974. "It's a great leap of faith for someone to take an idea, bring it to me, and ask me to design and build something," he says. The result "could be there 50 or 80 years. People will see it and they'll respond to it with joy, or maybe they'll ask, 'What was he drinking?' It's an amazing thing."

As proud as he is of the profession, Boynton also recognizes that it faces great challenges. "I'm hearing predictions that 350,000 jobs will leave this country that are architecture-related, mostly in production. It's a scary thing," he muses. "I don't think design will leave, but some predict it will." But Boynton finds reason to hope, citing his confidence in the leadership of the profession. "We understand that technology can work to our benefit and that's the way we are heading."

Even after decades of practice, Boynton says he comes to the office every day and finds 90 percent of the work is fun. "The other 10 percent, I try not to do again."

Metal Roofing Panels

It's difficult to improve upon the view of the Washington Monument and other icons comprising the DC skyline, but the newest landmark, the Mandarin Oriental Hotel, adds a dramatic entry to the capitol at the 14th Street Bridge.

This nine-story hotel is topped with a striking mansard roof utilizing 20,000 sq. ft. of PAC-CLAD® Redi-Roof Batten panels finished in Hemlock Green. The Mandarin Oriental is part of The Portals, a mixed-use development that is the largest project in the history of Washington, DC. Brennan Beer Gorman Monk Architects designed the luxury hotel in the French style while reflecting the city's iconic neoclassic architecture. The nearly vertical roof installation was done by Progressive Services, Inc., of Dover, PA.

Panels are corrective-leveled during fabrication to provide superior panel flatness. Our PAC-CLAD® Kynar 500® finish, covered by a non-prorated 20 year warranty, is now available in 42 standard colors on steel and 37 standard colors on aluminum.

For more information regarding our complete line of metal roofing products, please call us at 1-800-PAC-CLAD or visit our website @ www.pac-clad.com.

T. David Fitz-Gibbon Architecture Firm Award

Hanbury Evans Wright Vlattas + Company

Excelling in campus design, historic preservation, and cultural arts projects, Hanbury Evans Wright Vlattas + Company knows how to create a unique sense of place, be it an Olympic Village, a Southside Virginia arts center, or the roof of their own Norfolk headquarters. In practice for nearly a quarter-century, the firm originated in two architectural practices founded by John Paul Hanbury, FAIA, and Michael Evans, FAIA, which merged in 1985. Today, the firm's other partners are Jane C. Wright, AIA, and Nicholas E. Vlattas, AIA.

Designers who understand the context of built form, Hanbury Evans has earned 47 design and preservation awards, building a reputation that extends nationwide. Clients enthuse over the firm's quality of work, dedication to community, and attention to historic detail. And their vision has changed the living and learning experiences of thousands of college students nationwide.

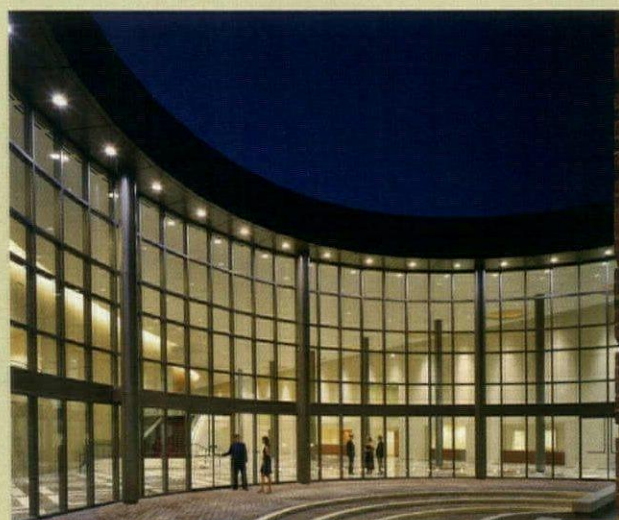

Firm members focus on developing deep knowledge and seek design opportunities that will allow them to explore and expand those interests. They share this expertise with colleagues, speaking and teaching regionally and nationally. Since 1997, for example, firm members have taught a campus design course for executives at the Harvard Graduate School of Design.

Hanbury Evans has made a significant imprint on Hampton Roads as well. Renovation of the American Theatre, Christopher Newport University's Ferguson Center for Performing Arts, and stunning corporate campuses such as the USAA Regional Headquarters are a few of their top projects. In keeping with their advocacy of sustainable design, Hanbury Evans created a green roof atop their own office building.

The firm has served the AIA at all levels. Principal Jane Wright is currently a trustee of the Virginia Center for Architecture Foundation, following in the footsteps of John Paul Hanbury. In addition, the firm generously donated design services for the renovations of the Branch House as the new Virginia Center for Architecture.

TILT-UP CONSTRUCTION For School Buildings & Additions

Photos by Tilt-Up Concrete Association

Architects are creating beautiful, functional and spacious school facilities using tilt-up construction, realizing significant cost and time savings over traditional methods.

Tilt-up construction is flexible, durable and safe with considerable long-term operating efficiencies in energy and maintenance costs.

Speedy Construction: Schools have been built "from the ground up" in four months using tilt-up.

Design Freedom: Diverse floor plans and exterior designs offer great flexibility.

Durability: Vandalism and costly maintenance are minimized.

Safety: Studies prove concrete outlasts other materials exposed to fire, remaining structurally sound for as much as 4 hours.

Quiet: Concrete's sound absorbing qualities mean quieter classrooms.

Energy Efficient: Reduced energy costs with concrete's heat-sinking properties and integral insulation.

Spacious: Unobstructed "open" halls, classrooms, and gymnasiums.

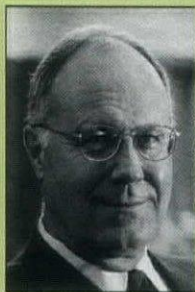

Cost Effective: Lower material and labor costs help deliver quality buildings at a reduced investment.

John T. Casteen III

John Casteen has raised the bar for thoughtful institutional architecture throughout the state and created a model for clients throughout the country. During the 15 years of his University of Virginia presidency, Casteen has been an ideal steward of Thomas Jefferson's historic creation, securing private financial support for its preservation and establishing the position of Architect of the University for a new approach to design oversight. The master plan created during his tenure outlined extensive new projects while preserving historic structures, building within infill sites, and using sustainable landscape strategies. Casteen has brought the consideration of architectural excellence to the forefront in all discussions about building design and construction at the university.

As a result, $735 million has been invested in the physical plant of the university thus far, and the value of projects currently under construction exceeds $310 million. Of the approximately 575 buildings or major facilities that belong to the University of Virginia, 100 of these have been built, substantially remodeled, or acquired during Casteen's presidency. In all of these projects, the University has consistently employed Virginia architecture firms to oversee building and local companies to complete the construction.

Casteen has demonstrated a strong sense of responsibility to balance the growing needs of students with the historical importance of Jeffersonian design. A three-time graduate of the University himself, he has shown a deep commitment to the education of students, the advancement of research, and service to the Commonwealth and nation.

Accessible design isn't just a human issue. It's also an economic issue – especially for those involved in multifamily housing projects. In fact, if any new multifamily buildings violate accessibility guidelines under state or federal law, architects and builders could be liable for penalties up to $50,000 for the first violation and up to $100,000 for any additional violations. Distinguished Achievement Award

Daniel J. Feil, FAIA

Serving the profession in the rare capacity of public architect, Dan Feil champions that role, working to revise the standards for architects in federal service and co-developing the Thomas Jefferson Award for Public Architecture. From managing the restoration and new construction at Ronald Reagan Washington National Airport to managing the design and construction of two new buildings at the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts, Feil continues to create processes that have become models for federal agencies.

J. Kenneth Payne, Jr., AIA

Kenney Payne took the lead in scrutinizing, evaluating, and recommending building code adjustments that would protect the public while making economic sense for building owners. As a result of his expertise, Payne represented the Virginia Society AIA in meetings that predated the transition to the International Building Code. Through more than two years of discussions, ranging from simple clarifications to heated differences of opinion, he maintained a level-headed presence, providing well-reasoned positions on every aspect of the building code.

M. Kirk Train, AIA

Charlottesville's Kirk Train has received numerous design awards from both the Virginia Society and the Central Virginia Chapter, each of which he has served as a board member. He currently chairs the Virginia Center for Architecture Foundation Board of Trustees, and has been instrumental in fundraising for the Virginia Center for Architecture. His service extends beyond the profession to the Albemarle County Architectural Review Board, the Friends of the Jefferson-Madison Regional Library, and the American Lung Association.

Ralph B. Higgins

Higgins, a partner in Higgins & Gerstenmaier Land Planning & Landscape Architecture in Richmond, is recognized for his lengthy experience as landscape designer and planner for residential, corporate, academic, urban, and industrial clients. Over a 35-year career, he evolved the firm founded by his father into an influential land planning design organization. A graduate of the University of Georgia School of Environmental Design, he also teaches in the Department of Urban Studies and Planning at Virginia Commonwealth University. Higgins has served on numerous planning and advisory committees.

Frank A. Parsons

Parsons, of Lexington, spent four decades at Washington and Lee University, leading more than a dozen significant building campaigns as coordinator of facilities planning. An architect who endorsed his nomination noted that Parsons "challenged us to keep the best interests of the school and its students always as the primary basis for our work." His advocacy for the integrity and value of the architecture profession combined with his knowledge and experience into a leadership that benefited the university and architectural professionals. Even in retirement, Parsons oversaw the reconstruction of historic Lexington Presbyterian Church following a devastating fire in 2000.

Malcolm F. Robson

Robson, a master grainer, is recognized internationally for his specialized craft of imitating wood and marble on any paintable surface. Before bringing his firm, Robson Worldwide Graining, Ltd., to Lorton, Robson apprenticed with his father in London and worked in many important English properties, including Buckingham Palace and the Houses of Parliament. His skills have now enhanced numerous Virginia sites of national significance, including Mount Vernon, where he makes annual visits. He generously shares his expertise with numerous sites, and with the public via PBS and the BBC. The fifth-generation craftsman continues the family tradition as he passes his knowledge on to his son.

John G. Zehmer

Dinwiddie County native Jack Zehmer has been involved in numerous restoration and reuse projects throughout his 35-year career in the preservation field. He was the City of Richmond's first historic preservation planner in the 1970s, where his efforts stabilized and revitalized Monument Avenue and other historic areas, as well as promoted new creative infill vital to economic revival. As executive director of Historic Richmond Foundation, Zehmer oversaw restoration of individual landmarks and the creation of a successful publications program. At the Virginia Department of Historic Resources, he directed the Capital Region Office. Zehmer's lengthy support of architecture has been instrumental in maintaining the Commonwealth's man-made environment.

The Award for Preservation

Carlton Abbott & Partners, P.C.

Over four decades, Carlton Abbott & Partners has preserved and enhanced the regional cultural landscape, restoring historic structures, developing interpretive sites that honor historical architecture, and engaging in planning efforts that have preserved the character of place while enhancing public understanding of Virginia's rich architectural heritage. The firm's design goal is always to produce site-specific design that responds contextually to the locally built environment, cultural landscape, and historic gradations, while carefully incorporating the programmatic philosophy of each project. Among projects reflecting the firm's preservation expertise are Chippokes Plantation State Park, the Wolstenholme Towne Site at Carter's Grove, and the Jamestown Project, which will revitalize and preserve that site's resources for the 400th anniversary of its founding and beyond.

Mimi Sadler helps property owners respond to historic preservation regulatory and incentive programs. She conducts research and documentation and completes National Register of Historic Places nominations and state and federal investment tax credit applications, guided by her experience at the Virginia Department of Historic Resources and her private practice in preservation. Sadler's efforts have benefited properties and communities all across the Commonwealth. Her recent National Register nomination reports include the Norfolk Naval Shipyard Historic District, Richmond's E.M. Todd Building, and Orange High School. And she has helped extend the lives of many historic buildings through her work on tax credit applications for landmarks such as E.C. Glass High School, Appomattox Regional Governor's School, and the Virginia Center for Architecture.

Susan R. Stein

Susan Stein is curator at Monticello, where her work has focused on the links between architectural and cultural heritage. Her educational programs take new approaches to the presentation of Jefferson's legacy, and her exhibitions and publications have drawn national attention. Stein's book, The Worlds of Thomas Jefferson at Monticello, was nominated for both a Pulitzer Prize and a National Book Award. Monticello's president noted that Stein's "core values relate to her appreciation of architecture and Jefferson's towering significance in the field." Her expertise is widely sought by other house museums, and she serves as an adjunct professor at the University of Virginia.

How to Use This

Directory

FIRST

If you are trying to locate architects in a particular area, but don't know the firm by name, look in the index that begins on page 72. That is organized by city and town.

SECOND

If you know the name of the firm you are trying to locate, simply thumb through the following pages and find the name listed alphabetically in the directory.

THIRD

Here's what you will find under the firm listing.

• Name, address, and phone number.

• Principals and firm personnel

If you want to talk about a possible commission, ask for the person listed as "client contact." If you want to talk to the firm about using a new product or service, ask for the person listed as "vendor contact." In smaller firms, these contacts will be the same person.

• Principal areas of practice

While architects pride themselves on being generalists, many firms develop particular strengths over the years. This listing includes the four most important areas of a firm's practice, though other project types aren't necessarily excluded from the range of work a firm is qualified to do.

• Recent projects

We have limited each firm to naming no more than five of their recent completed buildings. Take note: Many of the buildings may have been recognized for design excellence or other attributes. If you are considering hiring this firm, go take a look at some of the buildings first and ask the building owners about their level of satisfaction with the results.

LAST

A few words about this directory. Contained here are the architecture firms that have a member of the Virginia Society AIA as a principal. There may be other principals and employees at the firm whose names are not listed. The information published here is provided by the firms and we assume it to be accurate, but you may wish to verify data on a particular firm by calling directly to inquire.

When AIA Contract Documents are in force, everyone's interests are in balance.

AIA Contract Documents were created from a consensus of contractors, developers, lawyers, and architects expressly to balance the interests of all parties. They cover all phases of a project from beginning to end. Courts have recognized their legal legitimacy time after time. Which is why no other standard contract document system is as effective at keeping projects running smoothly and finishing successfully. They're available in paper or electronic form with flexible pricing. Plus, our new software release features full Microsoft® Word functionality and improved navigational aids, as well as formatting and collaboration options.

G Forms can now be edited in Microsoft® Word.

And, we install our products on your site for you.

Dreaming Creek now offers a full line of flooring and associated mill-work products. Re-sawn heart pine flooring with its tight growth rings and rich patina or beautiful hardwood flooring such as oak, black walnut, and American chestnut can enhance any project. We also provide timber mantles in a variety of species and in various surface treatments.

So whether your project is residential or commercial, a porte cochère, pool enclosure, or a barn, let Dreaming Creek work with you to incorporate the timeless beauty of timber frame construction into your project.
